10th December 2021

09:00 – 10:35 (Sri Lanka Time) - virtual (Zoom) event

Development Perspectives in Built Environment

About the session;

World is changing its morphology caused by physical environmental processes as well as anthropogenic activities. The adverse impact from anthropogenic activities are far more extensive compared to the impact from physical environmental processes. Unplanned and ad hoc changes have created severe global issues like global warming and climate change where world is looking for answers to mitigate and reduce the future risks and impact. Many sustainable approaches like eco-system based adaptation, carbon neutral cities, green and blue infrastructure measures have been introduced under the built environment planning to make our communities resilient. This session will focus on new trends, challenges and interventions of sustainable development towards built environment planning which focused on making communities resilient.
